

Dear friends,

Joylin was born in Red Deer in 1970. She moved to Calgary in 1975. Joylin earned her Bachelor of Arts degree in French from the University of Calgary, and has worked as an NCCP certified coach at the Calgary Winter Club for the past seven years.

Joylin has spent many years volunteering for a variety of charities, including the Calgary CP Association, Inn from the Cold and Ronald McDonald House. Her caring nature and genuine concern for her community is demonstrated in all the activities she participates in.

Joylin is from the fourth generation Alberta born Mah Poy family featured in the Mavericks exhibit in the Glenbow Museum. The Nodwell family is steeped in similar tradition.

"I believe in accountability and the detailed disclosure of important decisions especially pertaining to the usages of public monies," says Nodwell. "I hear it from nearly all residents I visit with, they want greater disclosure upfront. They want to know the budget amounts before decisions are made, and greater accountability at the end of projects," says Nodwell. "I myself am disappointed at the lack of disclosure, particularly at a point when decisions can still be influenced by public input." Nodwell cites the West LRT project and the lesser known ENMAX Legacy Parks Fund Steering Committee projects as recent examples of poor optics and transparency.

Joylin is also committed to improve processes and efficiencies in City Council and administration, in particular, putting forth motions that would enforce transparency and accountability when public monies are involved.

Being an approachable and easily accessible Councillor is important for the community. Joylin believes that participating regular community meetings is a huge priority. "It is a great opportunity for me to remain connected to residents by allowing them to voice concerns and share ideas. This direct involvement would also allow me to keep my community updated on the happenings around our City".

"Joylin is incredibly hard-working. She builds trust and consensus wherever she goes," says Campaign Manager, Nicole Bradac. "Her compassion and strength is what's needed to build a stronger, more engaged community for all Ward 7 residents."
